About the Conference

African Literature is a unique blend of varied experiences felt and realized by the native writers of the continents. Its popularity grew in immense after 1950's, wherein its history has been existing from the age of past, goes back to the reality of thousands of years. It personifies the specific entity of each of the country of Africa, filled with rich heritage and ancestry. The traditions endorsed with folklores, songs of each tribe of specific regions, catches the attention of readers who come across such narrations in African short stories and fiction.

Each of 54 nations of the African Literature has their own history depicting their culture, tribes and traditions. In spite of their uniqueness, they share certain commonalities through their literature. It comes as literary rendition of the continent as a whole. It is a blended textual uniqueness of African Literature that attracts the audience filled with curiosity to know more. Though at times seems to be complicated in content mixed with local language expressions, yet it is classic of the reality that exists in Africa. Most story lines are exactly the real life happenings of the past and of the present. It would be cumbersome to define and enclose the ideology of African literature within the bounded limits. Hence its literary impact is open to all types of readers reflects the bonds of human life and to the tribal realities. Most writers of Africa believe in writing in their mother tongue and translations made available for the university of the reach. Further, some of the writers believe in creating viability of the content by writing in English in specific.

The historical dating of African Literature runs far behind from the Egyptian and Arabian era where the civilization originated with African sensibilities. None the less, African continent had faced several oddities in their reality and life patterns, influenced by colonization of many imperialist powers. Losing their identity to imperialism and capitalistic regimes, gave rise to African literature of vibrant force to the audience. Most novels have references to exploitation of indigenous people and the resources of the land. Slavery originated giving impact as a core literary concept. Enslaved African people taken across different parts of the world by the imperialist rulers, largely against their will leading to African Diaspora.

It should be referred that Sub-Saharan African Literature become an important part of the African Literature of the present world scenario, bringing in a rhythmic feel of life and life styles of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. It would be our foremost interest to look beyond the most recent works to understand the complete development of African Literature. It's with this insight that the international conference on African Literature has been organized with the presence of living African writers.

Topics taken for discussion:

- ▶ Pre-colonial idyllic life without the influence of colonization
- ▶ Tribal traditions, greater influence of nature
