College students' tribute to Karnad

Students rehearsed for a month

Breaking the concept that the head is over the body, students of Mannar Thirumalai Naicker College paid a tribute to eminent playwright, author, thinker, filmmaker and actor Girish Karnad by staging his magnum opus Hayavadana.

Written in 1971, Hayavadana was inspired by Thomas Mann's The Transposed Heads, which was borrowed from the Sanskrit Kathasaritsagara stories. It is based on the imperfections of humans and our limitations.

The play begins with Haya-vadana, a man with a human body and a horse face, seeking to become complete. On the other hand, Padmini wants a perfect husband with the wisdom of Devadatta and the physique of Kapila. Her constant search for fulfilment of desires drags the three into a tragic end. The lighting played a perfect partner to actors as the colours depicted the emotions of Padmini, Kapila and Devadatta. The set designs were painted by art director Siddharth Kutty.

Directed by N Elango and co-directed by Sarojaa V Kumar, the stories of Devadatta, Kapila and Padmini resonated with the audience for its multi-pronged approach to human relationships. Speaking to CE on why he chose this particular play of Karnad, the director said, "Karnad's plays are universal in its approach. Hayavadana is based on Indian folklore unlike other Indian English plays that have a western setting and characters. It is perhaps an attempt to retain our Dravidian art and culture." Elango was amazed by the flexibility of the text. "In the process of preparation, we had to demystify ourselves from the preconceived and prejudicial notions before getting into the text. Though the task of time-bound editing was quite hard, we used the exact lines of the playwright," he said.

Keerthi V Kumar portrayed the role of Padmini to a T. Justifying the Sati performed by Padmini in the play, she said, "Sati in this play was emblematic rather than a ritual. In fact, as per the belief of tribes, Padminis, who had been consumed by evil fire of society for ages, are personified as 'fortunate lady's flower'."

Lingeswari, professor from the Department of English, said, "Most of the students who performed on stage were from rural background. Within a month they picked up the dialogues. As I handle classes for various departments, I see an improvement in language in the students who have been involved in the production."

Produced by Fourth Wall Theatre and King's Theatre Production, Hayavadana will be open to public on August 31 from 10 am to 12 pm and 2 pm to 4 pm at the college auditorium. Tickets are priced at ₹100 for college students and ₹75 for school students.

Brief Report

Reader's Circle of Department of Tamil (SF) organized its monthly book review programme for the month of March, 2020 on 10.03.2020. K.Shankar, I BSc Maths reviewed the book Gautham Buddha-Dhrama and, K.Praveen Kumar from II BA Tamil reviewed Jeyakanthan's Kai Vialangu (Hand Cuff). This programme was helpful for the students to improve their learning skills, reading habits and public speaking skills and was influenced with the number of writers and their writing skills.
